

8th Free Annual Legal Interpreting Symposium, 2018

Proudly hosted by the School of Humanities & Languages (Interpreting & Translation Program) and the Faculty of Law

Implementing the Recommended National Standards for Working with Interpreters in Courts and Tribunals

Event Details:

Thursday 12 April 2018

5.45pm – 8.30pm

G04 Law Faculty building

Kensington Campus, UNSW

10 PD points

Launched in 2017, the Recommended National Standards for Working with Interpreters in Courts and Tribunals is a significant milestone towards uniformity in court interpreting across jurisdictions in Australia. This symposium aims to discuss the recommended national standards, the ways they can be implemented, the challenges ahead and the roles played by different stakeholders. Bringing together the judiciary, interpreting practitioners, agencies, educators and students, AUSIT and NAATI, the event will provide a forum for collaborative discussion of this important new development in legal interpreting. There will be a Panel comprising some members of the Specialist Committee appointed by the Judicial Council on Cultural Diversity that produced the Recommended National Standards to answer questions from the audience. We ask that you familiarize yourself with the document before the event and come prepared to ask specific questions: <http://jccd.org.au/publications/>
